The Pie Chart Shows Holidaymakers Using Different Types of Accommodation Model Answer

The given three pie charts describe the percentages of holidaymakers from a specific region of their preferred accommodation in the span of three different years. It can be noted that people's interests changed from choosing to stay at a friend or relative's house to staying at a hotel.

As per the given illustration, In 1965, 55% of holidaymakers stayed with friends and relatives and 16% stayed in hotels. For lodging in their holidays, 15% of people preferred Camping and 14% chose caravans. It should be mentioned that the majority of people selected friends and relatives' houses for their accommodation.

In the year of 1985, people who chose the friends or relatives house reduced to 35% and 37% preferred hotels. The use of camping was raised by 3% while interests towards caravan decreased.

Atlast, a minimal amount of people stayed at friends and relatives' houses during 2005. 38% of people selected hotel accommodation. In this year, camping became the least popular accomodation option. And, the usage of caravans was twice that of 1985.
